

Romulous

Secret Mechanism Device is one of a kind and it cannot be duplicated because of its secret chemicals and compounds implemented. It has a unique design that is the shape of a pyramid. The triangular symbol of the pyramid represents a firm foundation as it still stands while objects around are destroyed by its magnetic waves. The Karkase soldiers inside the black van had the Top Secret Mechanism Device, which caused the chain reaction explosion. Prior to the explosion, the Karkase soldiers were able to locate the Top Secret Mechanism Device in an old abandoned building outside the city of Moscow. Apparently, Anaconda used the building as a decoy because he was aware that his foster parents' death was linked to the Top Secret Mechanism Device.

Ecstasy and Anaconda meet up to discuss the aftermath during the battle against the KGB. They are conjuring up a plan to use the Top Secret Mechanism Device as a means of defense to rule the world. Anaconda approaches the underground city that is located outside of Moscow. Ecstasy and Nitro wait for his return. The black van pulls over to the side of the road approaching the city located in the rural region. The driver turns off his lights and flicks his infrared light three times. A Karkase soldier approaches the vehicle with a challenge and password.

Karkase Soldier: If I had a million dollars, what would I do? Would be give to the needy or keep it for myself and just be greedy?

Driver: If I had a million dollars, I would use it to raise the dead.

A few seconds later, and approximately fifty meters ahead the ground opens as it swallows the Earth's surface. The opening in the ground takes shape and form, like the mouth of a hungry predator. It swallows the black van as it travels down the esophagus to reach its final destination to be digested at the earth's surface. Anaconda has finally reached his destination as he walks through a tunnel leading him to Ecstasy and Nitro. He finally approaches the end of the tunnel. He looks around with a look of confusion from a wall that blocks his path. The driver flicks his infrared light three times and the wall lights up in the shape of a pyramid. He places his hand in the center of the pyramid and the wall shifts to the left, unveiling the underground city. Anaconda is amazed at this underground city. It is highly engineered and well-constructed like the pyramids of the early Egyptian rulers. The shape is identical; however the materials being used for the buildings were made from a metal substance, not of stone. The streets are paved for transportation, but only for non-gas operated vehicles, preventing pollution in the underground city. Greenhouses in the shape of a bubble figure made out of glass are used for agriculture, supplying the population with vegetation. The city is unique not only in design, but in its accommodation to the population. Anaconda is interrupted by Ecstasy after being briefly distracted with the foundations of the underground.

Katalambano - Rise and Fall of Power

Ecstasy: Welcome to the city of Utopia.

Anaconda: The city of Utopia. Last time I checked, the definition of Utopia means a better place. I believe you have the wrong concept of Utopia, because death is not my definition of a better place. As a matter of fact, I have no intentions of dying anytime soon.

Ecstasy: The Top Secret Mechanism Device is equivalent to the design of my buildings.